Thursday, October 31, 1872. The Canadian Pacific Railway.

The results of the preliminary survey of the route for this vast undertaking, wards of a year past, so far as they have been permitted to be made public, are of regards the eastern and western divisions toba." of the work. Careful explorations and surveys in the Lake Superior district, where It was feared d fliculties of an almost insurmountable character would have to be countered, have led to the discovery of a route by which the road can be carried with comparative ease, and at a cost pe mile very much below what it was conceived possible it could be built through that rough and rocky region of country. Once through that section of the route, and an entrance effected into what is served the North-West Territory, the only engineering difficulties to be met and evercome are those which relate to the construction of bridges over the numer-ous rivers which intersect that country.

until the base of the Rocky Mountains is reached. The crossing of the mountains through the Leather Head Pass, which it is generally believed will constitute the gateway through which the iron horse will effect an entrance upon the Pacific slope, and work his way down to the ocean, will be an easy tack indeed in comparison with the formidable obstacles with which the engineers on the Central Pacific line had to contend, and which they triumphantly overcame. On this side of the continent, which unquestionably presents grave engineering difficul-ties compared with anything to be met with on the eastern side, we are arsured that a perfectly practicable route has been found, and that throughout by far the larger portion of the distance, the road can be constructed at a cost per mile very little in advance of the averege cost of railway lines in other parts of the Dominion. Hence the problem as te the practicability of building the railway, from an engineering point of view, may be considered as satisfactorily settled. We believe it may also be taken as a foregone conclucion that the route of the road on this side the continent will be through the Chilcoaten country to Bute Inlet, and thence along the coast of Vancouver Island to E-quimalt harbor. We are assured, upon what we deem to be uned authority, that the possibility of bridging Seymour Narrows has been satisfactorily established, and even at a less cost than was at first supposed, and that therefore the Engineers are quite prepared to report favorably upon that route and the fixing of the terminus at Esquimalt. From the knowledge we previously had of the section of country is question, and the advantages which Esquimalt possesses over all other points the terminus in a commercial point of view, we never entertained a doubt as to what the judgment of the Engineers would be in relation to this question; NEW ACTS1 and, consequently, we were quite preir that the route was not only feasible but that it would be the one ultimately chosen. It is gratifying to observe that there is a growing feeling in the Eastern Provinces in favor of using all diligence to push this great enterprise forward. The primary motive which adtustes our eastern cousins and induces them to urge upon the Dominion Govpromptly and energetically with this matter, appears to be to provide a cheap and expeditious means for the transportation of immigrants from the seaboard vince of the Dominion. In the fertile valleys of the Great North-West, of which Canitoba constitutes but a fractional part, there is room for millions of settlers, land of the richest quality for agricultural purposes, open and ready for the plough, and the object they have in view is to people these lands by directing thither at least a portion of the vast tide of im-migration pouring in from the over-erowited cities and districts of Europe to the Continent of America in search of homes in our boundless unpeopled districts. We have every confidence that the Dominion Government will faithfully carry out the agreement they entered invince in respect of the commencement of the actual construction of the railway, notwithstanding the pressure which the crite are bringing to bear through the press, and doubtless will bring to bear on the floor of the House of Commons, if not to defeat the enterprise entirely, at least to delay it. In a well written article in the Toronto Leader, in which the obstructive policy of the Grits touch-ing the Canadian Pacific Railway is cominted upon and exposed, our contemporary concludes as follows: "We

The entertainment provided is of very varied character, and gives satisfaction to those who nightly patronize Nickerson's new enterprise. It is well the city is provided at this season of the year with something to assist the large number of men who are in our midst, to enjoy a night's amusement; and the theatre is just the place to go, to drive dull care away.
